THE TWO PENNANTS.
"The League Pennant is ours and fairly won," might have been the exclamation of the Giants after yesterday's game. It has been a long and a hard fight, but Manager Munn's men were organized for victory and they have "got there." "An ounce of pluck is worth a pound of luck," said GARFIELD. The champions have had all sorts of luck, but it is their pluck and skill that have won. But as is usually the case on this terrestrial ball field the earth, "there are other worlds to conquer."

QUEER POLITICS.
Mayor Hewitt had last night a less imposing send-off as a Citizens' Know-Nothing candidate for Mayor than DE LANCEY NICOLL had last year as an Independent Democratic and Citizens' candidate for District-Attorney. Independence was "treason" then. It is duty and patriotism in the eyes of some of the same men now. Well, well. "Politics is cur'us."

SUNDAY BEER.
Rev. Dr. Crosby will probably shock the fanatical temperance people with his suggestion that the saloons be permitted to keep open for an hour on Sunday at noon to sell beer to be taken home to drink. But Dr. Crosby recognizes, as many people of less understanding do not, that beer is just as necessary to the meals of thousands of families in this city as water, wine or coffee are to others. They have been brought up on it, and think it a less harmful and more grateful beverage than ice water.

A CRADLE-COFFIN.
"From the cradle to the grave" describes life's journey, be it long or short. But it is a rare thing that the cradle goes to the grave. This singular fancy has just been realized, however, in the burial of Mrs. RUTH HALL, of Wallingford, Conn., aged seventy-four years, in a coffin made from the cradle in which she was rocked nearly three-quarters of a century ago.

THE MAJORITY OF THE STATE SENATE COMMITTEE ON TRUSTS evidently believe with Mr. BLAINE that these conspiracies for robbery "have no place in a National campaign." Hence their action in smothering the investigation. Why don't the amateur ball nines get up a procession in honor of the champions?

OUR AUTOGRAPH COLLECTION.
It was Capt. Eddy's Watch. Edward Morris was arrested by Detective Connor of the Middle Street station, this morning, while attempting to pawn a gold watch, afterwards identified by Capt. E. D. Eddy, of one of the ocean steamship lines, as one of which he was robbed in the New York harbor. The watch was presented to Capt. Eddy by passengers for the New York harbor. It was held at the Essex Market Court this morning.

Central Labor's Campaign.
George Van Arman is the General Committee-man in the Sixth Congressional District, George H. McVey in the Fifth Congressional District, John Morrison in the Eleventh and Henry B. Collins in the Tenth. A mass-meeting of union workmen held in the Sixth Congressional District last night appointed committees to organize the First, Third, Fifth and Ninth Assembly districts for the purpose of securing the amendment of the conspiracy laws.

PERSONAL GOSSIP.
W. H. Farrell, partner in the banking firm of Eugene Kelly & Co., has returned from Warm Springs, Va., fully cured of a severe attack of rheumatism and now feels as chipper as a youth. Col. Eldridge Smith, of Washington, attractive inventor of many of the latest improvements in the street, surface and elevated railway systems. While here he is the guest of the Union League Club.

WORLDINGS.
A successful entrepreneur in Pittsburgh has 1,000 clients who each pay him $10 a year to keep their feet in proper condition. It is computed that this year's corn crop, if loaded for railroad shipment, would fill 8,575,671 cars, and make a train that would reach 16,449 miles, or two-thirds of the way around the world. Oscar W. Haywood, of Troy, N. C., who is widely known as a preacher of power and influence, was ordained a minister of the Baptist Church when only sixteen years old. He is now twenty-one, and edits a newspaper besides attending to his pulpit duties.

ENTHUSIASM IN THE SWAMP.
Hill Merchants Have a Big Outdoor Meeting for Cleveland and Thurman. The hide and leather men made things boom for Cleveland, Thurman and Hill in the lower part of the city this morning. A big solid and lofty platform was erected at Gold and Spruce streets and was covered with American flags and bannantins. Great enthusiasm was displayed. The young Duke of Newcastle is said to be surprisingly mortal and religious for a duke. He is a devoted churchman, and his hereditary possessions include the gift of nine church "livings." He is twenty-four years old, not at all handsome, and has an income of $300,000 a year.

FIGHTING FEATHER-WORKERS.
Determined Resistance to the Reductions in the Cohnfeld Factory. "Those who worked for 'pin money' have gone back, for they can afford it, and those who worked for bread are thus injured." That was the remark made by one of the striking men at the meeting of the Workingmen's Society. The present is the second reduction made in the Cohnfeld Company's manufactory within a month. One-half of the whole force of 400 employees is out on strike, and it is expected that many others will join as soon as they have assurances of support.

CARBOLIC ACID FOR WHISKEY.
Mrs. Dumas Makes a Probably Fatal Mistake in Her Drink. Anne Dumas, a married woman living on the second floor of 79 Chrystie street, got up from her bed early this morning and drank from a bottle of carbolic acid which lay on the shelf in her room. She had been drinking during the night, and mistook the bottle for one containing whiskey. She was removed to the hospital in terrible agony. The dose will probably prove fatal.

He Has Received the Prize.
To the Editor of The Evening World. I am happy to state that I received the check for $25 safely, and am glad to have won the prize in the Joke Contest. When I first wrote the joke I never thought to get the prize. With regards to Bill Nye, yours truly, RAYMOND E. KIDDER, Oct. 2.

No Loafers in Capt. Cassidy's Precinct.
When two hard-looking characters named James Ryan and Edward Farrell were arrested by Capt. Cassidy, of the Eldridge street station, at the Essex Market Court this morning and sent to the island for three months, Capt. Cassidy said his precinct was clear of corner loafers. During last month his policemen made the unprecedented record of 1,000 arrests.

Fearing the Worst.
Sammy (who is never allowed to stay out of school)—Howdie Harriet didn't come to school today. Mamma—Why not? Sammy—Cause his mother died. When you die may I stay home all day? Mamma—Yes, darling; you may stay out a whole week. Sammy (suspiciously)—Oh, I know; you mean to die in vacation.

IT IS A CRIME.
Wheat Cornering May Be Safe Under the Illinois Code, But Other Laws of God and Man Condemn It. It Should Be Punished to the Fullest Possible Extent.

In the action of Mr. Hutchinson in cornering the wheat market of Chicago, and as a result raising the price of flour $1.75 per barrel and raising the price of bread for rich and poor, a criminal act? If so, how should the cornerer or any other gambler in the necessities of life be punished? Judge Van Brunt, of the Supreme Court, looked thoughtful when an EVENING WORLD reporter put the questions before him. Several minutes elapsed before, in his cold, even voice, he said: "I am not prepared to answer those questions now. They are momentous ones. From the aspect of affairs at the present date, I think they are questions that I may be called upon any day to answer with an official opinion. Therefore I do not feel at liberty to answer them now."

BACK AT THE OLD STAND.
Arthur McQuade Miss Again in His Famous Junk-Shop. "Arthur is not at home. He went to business an hour ago," said Mrs. McQuade to an EVENING WORLD reporter who inquired for her husband at his residence, 313 East Thirtieth street, this morning. The little woman's eyes were red and swollen from weeping, but it needed only one glance at her hand, some, cheerful countenance to see that it was not sorrow which had caused her tears. Bidding her good morning the reporter went away to the famous old junk-shop where the boulder made most of his money.

It is a ramshackle, two-story double brick building, numbered 535 and 537 East Thirtieth street. Old rags, wire, iron and junk of every description were scattered on the street, and about the doorway through which the reporter entered. The dingy little office was crowded with men. Beside the railing the famous McQuade stood and conversed with them. He did not look them in the face, but kept his eyes fastened on a newspaper which he held in his hand. The conversation ceased when the reporter entered, and when he made himself known as a representative of THE EVENING WORLD the visitors fled out hurriedly, leaving McQuade and the reporter alone.

"How do you feel this morning, Mr. McQuade?" Without glancing up from his paper the ex-Alderman answered almost in a whisper: "Very well, I thank you. I do not wish to be interviewed." "As well as ever I did in my life. I ate a hearty breakfast and am all right in every respect." "You lost flesh while you were out of the city." "Yes; eight or ten pounds, but I will soon pick that up again." "What are your plans for the future?" "I have none. I mean to attend to my business. You see I am back here the first thing. I have only to mind my own business, and I wish other people would do the same." "Who has been conducting it while you have been away?" "Barney McDevitt, and I could have done no better if I had been here myself."

"If you resume an active interest in politics?" "Sighing sadly, McQuade answered, wearily: "I don't know. I think not. I have not thought about the matter. Really, I have nothing to say for publication." "If you any statement to make, Mr. McQuade, THE EVENING WORLD would print it." "Thank you, I believe it, but I have nothing to say at present."

Mr. McQuade refused absolutely to answer questions about his trial or his life in prison, beyond the simple statement, "I was treated kindly there." He was dressed in an old suit of black diagonal cloth. The only thing remarkable about his appearance was his face. That was ghastly white, even the lips being bloodless. This repulsive pallor is due to his long confinement in Sing Sing, and will wear away in a short time. His face was clean-shaven. Painters are at work on the three-story brick house occupied by McQuade and his family, painting it anew inside and out. A number of old-time friends of the boulder visited him at his home last night and proffered their congratulations on his release.

Some people think that McQuade's imprisonment has disenchanted him and that he cannot vote at the coming election. This is not so. He can vote. The decision of the Court of Appeals, granting him a new trial, sets aside his former conviction, and in the eyes of the law to-day he is a man never convicted of crime. Assistant District-Attorney Davis, speaking about McQuade's case this morning, said: "We have not received the opinion of the Court of Appeals yet. It has been sent for, but until it arrives, we can find out for sure upon what grounds the conviction has been set aside. We cannot say whether McQuade will ever come to trial again or not."

"How is that?" "Well, if the Court of Appeals holds that McQuade's conviction was secured through the admission of improper evidence that settles the matter. It would be useless for me to try him over again, having only the same evidence. If, however, the conviction has been set aside because of some legal errors we will try him again. Our calendars are crowded now, and we could hardly try him again this year anyhow."

Wall Street Cleveland and Thurman Men.
A meeting of voters connected with banking and brokerage firms who propose to vote for Cleveland at the election of 1892, met at 30 Broad street to form an auxiliary to the Stock Exchange Cleveland and Thurman Club.

BEDELL UNDER OATH.
He Was Sworn This Morning and His Examination Adjourned. James E. Bedell, the pioneer forger of mortgages, was brought into Supreme Court, Chambers, handcuffed to Keeper Smyth, of the Tombs, this morning. He was present in obedience to a writ of habeas corpus to be sworn and examined in two actions brought by his former employers, Shipman, Barlow, Laroque & Choates against the Bank of the State of New York to recover $184,000, the amount of Bedell's forged checks cashed by that bank. Judge O'Brien decided, after hearing arguments on both sides, to swear the witness and adjourn his examination for one week, to allow the defendant bank to prepare for the examination or to make the necessary motions as to its limitation.
